Orange Business Services extends the scope of its Cisco Collaboration portfolio to further develop new workspaces

Delivering global end-to-end Cisco cloud solutions for enterprise collaboration

Orange Business Services announces that it now extends its Cisco suite of cloud-based collaboration tools, with the newly launched WebEx® Collaboration Meeting Rooms (CMR), in addition to its range of hosted collaboration and conferencing solutions. Orange's extensive global presence in more than 160 countries will ensure that customers of these solutions can collaborate and communicate from anywhere in the world.

"The demand for unified communications and the cloud is particularly high among international businesses that need to have employees collaborate worldwide and coordinate their activities across borders, geographies and time zones. The extended availability of the Cisco Collaboration portfolio through Orange means that these tools are now completely integrated into customers' business processes with worldwide availability." said Karl Heinzlmann, senior vice president, Americas Solutions at Orange Business Services.

"Cisco is passionate about creating collaboration technology that changes the way people communicate—tools that empower people to work better together. Cisco's technology plus Orange's reach and relationships will transform workplace experiences for enterprises globally," said Richard McLeod, Senior Director of Worldwide Collaboration Channel Sales for Cisco.

Orange is playing a leading role in the digital transformation of workspaces. The Cisco Collaboration portfolio through Orange brings about a more mobile, collaborative and productive workforce; leveraging the full gamut of expertise and resources that both companies bring to the table. It builds off a 20-year partnership that has brought to market such innovative solutions as desktop-based unified communications, telepresence, and flexible connectivity through Wi-Fi and networking.
